Gary,

In reviewing your client's response to our question 7, I have a follow-up question.

In response to our question 7f, your client wrote in part: "Using studies provided by the Billings Regional Health care system, we determined that up to 70% of residents who completed their training in rural areas stayed in those areas."

Please provide our offices with copies of the studies provided by the Billings Regional Health care system.

Among other matters, I anticipate that those studies will:

- Identify the specific healthcare profession(s) involved.
- Provide specificity as to the training and practice areas. For example, if a healthcare worker was trained in Carbon County, Montana, do the studies indicate that the worker:
  - i. will stay in Carbon County,
  - ii. will stay in a rural area somewhere in Montana, or
  - iii. will stay in a rural area anywhere in the United States?
- Provide an exact percentage, instead of "up to 70%."
- Define "resident." For example, does "resident" mean that Montana is the legal residency of the healthcare trainee? Or, does it refer to legal residence in the county where the training occurs or in some other place? Or does "resident" have another meaning?

Thanks.

Ed
